Russia Church of the Transfiguration : Pattern

The Church of the Transfiguration is one of the wooden churches located on Kizhi, an island on Lake Onega, north east of Saint Petersburg. The church is made entirely from wood but does not use a single nail, and is 37 meters high with 22 onion-shaped domes, giving it a very distinctive and fairytale-like appearance. It is believed that the basic foundation for the church was completed in the 16th century, but this was destroyed in a fire from a lightning strike, and the church was rebuilt in 1714. The wooden churches of Kizhi, including this Church of the Transfiguration, were registered as a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1990.
